Late Foreign Intelligence.

NEW YORK, May 3.

We lay before the readers of the MERCANTILE ADVERTISER this morning later European Intelligence than has been received in America.

The ship Cotton Planter, Jefferies, arrived last evening within the Hook, in 37 days from Liverpool. She left Liverpool on the 26th March, & the capt. has obligingly favored us with the paper he brought—the London COURIER of the 23d.

The extracts which follow comprize every article it contains of a political nature in which the public can have an interest:—

LONDON, March 23.

Downing street, March 22.

By dispatches received this morning from the Earl of Elgin, His Majesty's Ambassador Extraordinary at Constantinople, dated January 15, 1803, it appears that the differences which had subsisted between the Sublime Porte and the Beys of Egypt, have been satisfactorily arranged through the mediation of His Majesty's Ambassador. (Lon. Gaz.)

Our preparations, have produced the effect of stopping the sailing of the Louisiana expedition, and of the Dutch Squadron, under vice Admiral Hartinck. On Friday last a Courier arrived at the French Ambassador's at the Hague, with orders that the squadron from Louisiana should remain in port, and that the troops should be cantoned at Helvoet till further orders. The expedition was to have failed to day.

Vice Admiral Hartinck's Squadron was to have sailed at the same time for the Mediterranean, to relieve Admiral De Winter. But the Dutch government with to wait the issue of the negotiations between this country and France.

The Dutch Funds continue falling.

Admiral Lord Gardner arrived at Portsmouth yesterday, and is to hoist his flag to day on board the Neptune.

Admiral Lord Keith is very actively employed at Plymouth in superintending the fitting out of the ships. A great number of prime seamen have entered within these few days.

It has been rumoured that in consequence of the First Consul's behaviour to Lord Whitworth, at the audience on Sunday fortnight, his Lordship has intimated to the Minister for Foreign Affairs that he shall not attend the Consular Levees, without a proper explanation of the events of that day. His Lordship acts with proper spirit.—An insult to our Ambassador is an insult to the British nation, and an ample apology ought to be demanded for it.

A Cabinet Council sat several hours yesterday upon the dispatches received from France.

"By letters from Frankfort of the 10th of March we are informed," say the Paris Papers, which we received yesterday, "that the English merchants in Germany discover the utmost jealousy and uneasiness in regard to the endeavours of the French to revive their trade with that country. They view with indignation the new trading establishments in different ports. They blame France for the care with which Spain now endeavours to protect her manufactures, by prohibiting the exportation of Spanish wool. They see, with all the feelings of malicious envy, the vigorous measures taken on the Scheldt and Rhine to prevent the importation of English manufactures; the encouragement given to those who attempt a smuggling trade into England, and that declaration of Cherbourg to be a free port for liquors and brandy, which is likely to produce a large exportation of these articles to the opposite coasts of England and Ireland. The establishment too, of Chambers, and of a General Council of Commerce in France, has given much food for English envy. They are still in alarm in regard to Colonel Sebastiani; and they talk of the cession of the port of Tetuan, and of the fortifications of Tournehout, at the mouth of the Scheldt, to France. They will suppose, that a squadron of two ships of war, and several transports, has failed to take possession of Macao, ceded to France by Portugal."

There is said to be now a very frequent correspondence between Berlin and Paris, relating to an approaching interview between the King of Prussia and the First Consul, when the latter visits Belgium.

We extract the following articles from a Rotterdam paper of the 19th instant,

"The grand question of peace or war is suspended on the will of Bonaparte. There is no absolute hostility pre-determined by the English Ministry; the limits of concession, on their part, are chalked out; France may approach that point without injury to her safety or her honor it is hoped she will weigh the consequences, and suffer the scale to preponderate on the dearest interests of this country, which are immediately at stake: thus; convincing us of the importance of her amity."

When the dates of the affair at the Cape of Good Hope are examined, it would appear that the present preparations for war have not been too precipitate. From the time the dispatches were sent out to forbid the surrender, we may reckon on five months difference with the French Government about something or other, independent of Malta, which appears a more recent cause of dispute.

Great exertions are made at Vienna, to improve the commercial state of the town and port of Trieste.

It is to be referred to the Diet of the Empire, to provide to Bavaria an indemnity for Eichstätt.

The Duke of Modena refuses to relinquish his former rights, till the countries of Ortenau and Brigau shall be, without diminution put into his civil and military possession.

Like master, like man. Talleyrand, as well as his Sovereign, can be insolent to the Ministers of those States degraded by French intrigues; but he was far from approving of the violence offered towards the representative of the King of the first Nation upon earth: he, therefore, with all humility, entreated his Master to make it up. His maxim is, that until France has a Navy equal to that of Britain, the Chief Consul must sink his pretensions to be the modern Alexander, and content himself, with respect to England, to act à la Philippe. His advice, however, was so ill received, that he gave in his resignation, and for twenty four hours rumour appointed him different successors, such as Segur, Otto, Calliard, &c. but while the public were thus busy, Bonaparte invited Talleyrand to dine with him in private, and, after some explanation, returned him his Ministerial Portfeuille, and he is, at present, again the first favourite of the First Consul.

Authentic letters from Dunkirk state, that there were a few days ago disturbances among the persons employed in the Dock yards of the Republic, who wished to regulate their pay according to the price of provisions. Several of the rioters were taken up, but the armed force was under the necessity of being called in.—Tranquillity seemed to be restored after the apprehension of the ringleaders; but a great degree of fermentation still exists.

The merchants of Turin have obtained from the French Government the free exportation of wrought silks from Piedmont.

Three fine frigates, the Amelia, Athalion, and African, are we understand, all to cruise off Gorée, to watch the motions of the Dutch, should it be necessary, to give timely information to Government.

The famous Klopstock died at Ham-burgh on the 13th of March, in the 79th year of his age.

Late from FRANCE.

By the Sally, capt. Ingersol, arrived at Boston, on Wednesday last, in 30 days from Bordeaux, a regular series of Paris papers to the 21st March, have been received. These papers do not, however, contain a single indicative of war. They mention the preparatory proceedings in England, which have been detailed here; but they do it with perfect nonchalance. In short, the Paris papers are now as nearly barren of political news as the Madrid Gazette. They are filled up with projects of the laws which are to form the civil code; and articles respecting the internal economy of the Republic. One might as soon expect to find an opinion or observation on the affairs of the government of an Algerine Gazette, as in a Paris newspaper. The government takes its measures, and pursues them without troubling the people to think of any thing, but yielding obedience thereto. Thus far the Paris papers.

[Boston Gaz.]

The intelligence, however, which the following letters, received by this arrival, convey, is highly interesting.

Extract of a letter from Bordeaux, dated March 26.

"There has been for a few days past, serious appearances of an immediate War between this country and England. How the business will terminate is not yet known. It is, however, worthy of note, that Bonaparte observed lately to Mr. Livingston, that if such an event should take place, the peace of America would not be disturbed on the part of France. This is reported, and I believe upon good authority."

Another Letter—March 27.

"War is the order of the day; Malta the ostensible bone of contention; and the general opinion is, that an actual state of hostilities cannot be far distant. My private sentiment however is, that an accommodation will take place. France is too much exposed in her commerce, and too feeble in her fleet, to take the Bull by the horns."

Another Letter—same date.

"Appearances, at this moment, strongly indicate, that Europe is again to be plunged into the horrors of war—and the active preparations making by the Government of Great Britain, induce a belief, that this event is almost certain, the points in controversy between France and Great Britain, can only be surmised, but it is supposed they relate to a commercial treaty, and a determination on the part of the latter, to retain or procure some port in the Mediterranean, for its ships of war. From the measures adopted, and pursuing by both countries, the commencement of hostilities may speedily be expected; concessions on the part of the First Consul can only prevent this, to which his ambitious and proud mind, under existing circumstances will not submit."

"Since these events, our minister at Paris is treated with more attention and respect; this augurs well, so far as it proves that the government of France desires to cultivate the friendship of the U. States, and appreciates its consequence in the political world; it is obviously for the interest of Great Britain to adopt similar measures, which it is hoped will prevent the necessity of our uniting with either nation, and thereby insure to us the great advantages of a neutral commerce."

"Coffee and sugar have advanced here considerably."

Another letter—same date.

"For 10 days past there have been strong apprehensions of war between this country and Great Britain, which have had great influence on our markets; considerable purchases of West India produce were made at an advance of from 5 to 10 per cent. and the course of exchange on London experienced a material rise. But this agitation has entirely subsided, in consequence of reports that harmony is re-established; which, if confirmed, we may reasonably expect affairs will soon revert to their situation previous to the late hostile preparations."

Several letters from Bordeaux of the same date, corroborate the report of an amicable adjustment of recent differences between England and France; none of them, however, so fully as the above; but on the contrary, they express doubts of its correctness, and some of them go so far as to say, that the report had subsided, and a war confidently expected.

In addition to the above intelligence, we have been obligingly furnished with the following note addressed to capt. Ingersol, and sent on board his vessel on the evening of the 27th March.

"DEAR SIR,

By the mail, arrived this day at six o'clock, P. M. it appears, that the hostile preparations in England continue, with great activity; and though there were reports yesterday, that all differences were settled between the two Governments, the aspect of affairs is at this moment very alarming to the friends of peace. The Stocks at Paris fell in one day 8 per cent, and the prevailing opinion there was, THAT THERE WOULD BE A WAR. Letters from London are also in the same file.

Yours, G. T."

Capt. Ingersol verbally reports, that the most active exertions were making in all the ports of France to equip and man their navy; and that a heavy impregment of men took place at Bordeaux on the evening previous to his sailing. This circumstance is unusual in France, and indicates something of moment.

Alexandria Advertiser.

FRIDAY, MAY 6.

Captain Morgan of the Sufannah (arrived at Philadelphia) informs, that while he lay at New Orleans, several persons, among whom were three Frenchmen, were apprehended and imprisoned, on a charge of having conspired with the blacks, instigating them to rebellion and massacre. Much uneasiness prevailed for several days. At the time of his sailing, the public mind had regained tranquility.

Phil. Gaz.

According to the representation of capt. Rielly, arrived at Philadelphia 2d May, it appears, that the apprehensions of war with the United States, created a great panic in the Spanish court. While he lay there, an express arrived from Madrid with dispatches, to be put on board a fast sailing king's vessel, with orders to sail immediately, for any port in the U. S. In less than half an hour, a Spanish brig was under way. This circumstance excited much consternation; and the general impression was that a war could only be averted by the speedy transmission of conciliatory dispatches.

It will be recollected, that this brig arrived some time since at Baltimore, and that the contents of her dispatches were assurances of a continuation of the right of deposit at New Orleans.

Ibid.

Extract of a letter, dated Paris, 17th January, 1803, to a gentleman in Charleston.

"Every thing quiet; the French Minister going to America; only waits until his government make arrangements for paying the debt due to our citizens—when that will be I cannot say. I hope the Kentucky lads are now in possession of New Orleans—if not, you have no spunk—we will hit here; it would not hurt us; but the contrary."

A London paper of the 12th of March contains the following:

As is natural, yesterday abounded in reports. It was said that letters had been received by some respectable House in the City announcing

That an action had taken place between the French Squadron and the ships under the command of Sir Richard Bickerton, off Malta; in which after a short but smart engagement, the British Seamen proved victorious. The cause of this rencontre is said to have arisen as follows: The French Admiral insisted on entering the harbor of Malta, notwithstanding the strongest remonstrances on the part of Sir Richard Bickerton, who declared that his orders would not admit the entrance of such a military force, the Frenchman maintained, that as Malta was a neutral port, no man should preclude him from this gratification. Sir Richard at last finding all civil remonstrances in vain, fired upon the Frenchman as he proceeded towards the harbour, when the conflict terminated as already described.

Ecce Iterum Crispinus!!!

To be continually in a state of active hostility against public imposition and falsehood, however laudable it may be in itself, to an ingenious mind must be painful. To be condemned to the drudgery of perpetually watching the same mill-horse round of public deception, of repeatedly detecting the same imposture, and of meeting at every return the pertinacious repetition of the same dull, bungling cheat upon the people, is certainly vexatious. Yet it is a task to which every honest man is bound by his civil duties, and from which the managers of public Journals above all others cannot shrink without guilt. Some time ago, when falsehood, if once detected, dare not show its front again in the same shape, this kind of care would have been superfluous; but now, when it returns to the charge, unabashed by shame, unchecked by remorse, when it attempts to weary one part of the people into acquiescence, and cajoles another into belief, society and every thing valuable in it must crumble to ruins, if such things, though they return a thousand times to the charge, are not as often encountered, and driven back. Wearisome and odious to ourselves as this task of repetition must be, we will perform this duty strictly and conscientiously. Our readers cannot be surprised, if in answering such tautologous nonsense, tautology should appear; for invention must be exhausted where its labor is great, and its food but little. sinels, cannot be ashamed of any thing!
And impudence confers upon their asserons a spurious air of authority, and imposes attention where modest virtue can scarcely obtain a hearing. So that tho' they are far from being worthy of a reply, they must be answered, that they may not be dangerous. At the same time we declare, that if it were not that the ingenious, who are always unwary, too often unthinking, might become the dupes of those tricks, clumsy and bungling as they are, we should be rather disposed to laugh at the grave confidences, or to turn with disgust and contempt from the cold, torpid, phlegmatic disregard of shame, displayed by those who advance such things, and repeat them again after they have been refuted, than to consider them as worthy of serious refutation. Those worthy democrats seem as if condemned for their sins, like Sisyphus of old, eternally to labor in rolling up a hill the huge stone of falsehood, which rolls down again upon their heads, and keeps them in the endless, fruitless labour of the damned.

"Then Sisyphus, the nearest mate in woe Drew my regard; he with distended nerves Aye rolls a ponderous stone up a rugged rock: Urg'd up the steep cliff slow, with hand and foot,
It mounts; but bordering on the cloudy peak Precipitous adown the slopy side;
The rapid orb devolving back renews Eternal toil, which he, with dirt besmear'd, And dew'd with smothering sweat, incessant plies."

These, or such as these, are the Tartarean labours which employ the blessed inhabitants of the Pandemonium erected in America by the disciples of France, Robespierre and the Rights of Man.

What mind, not tainted or perverted by the arts of the ruling party, can fail to turn with abhorrence from the weekly reiteration as stupid as it is false, and as shameless as either, of the applause lavished upon our present, and the censure cast upon our former, financiers. Already it has been proved that those who now keep the key of the treasury, not only have not the merit of bringing into it a single cent, but have to answer for having opposed almost every measure, and of having avowed open hostility to the whole of the system of finance of their predecessors, the productiveness of which system, nevertheless, they and their agents have now the impudence to boast of as if it were their own. Already it has been proved to their teeth that the causes of the expenditure of the public money during the former administrations not only went hand in hand with the public will, but were called for by the public voice, as a defence against foreign insult and wrong; proved too that a part of it was incurred by the suppression of two insurrections, abetted by some of those very men who blame that expence. If every segar, and every glass of grog or wine drank in the Union, were known to be taken from the banks & the waters of Lethe, those democratic agents could not think the people of America more stupid, more lost to all recollection of the past, more obviously drunk and insensible than they must think them when they imagine them to be capable of allowing such downright, direct contradictions of truth and matter of fact as they offer them, not once, but decies repetita. Thus though over and over again answered, though rolled like Sisyphus down the hill with their falsehoods on their heads, they come forward with the stale, democratic slang story, that the former administration was extravagant, compared with the present, when any man who has brains enough in his pate to fill the cranium of a gander, knows that the causes for that expenditure ceased before the present administration came into office, and that therefore to have done otherwise than refrained it, would have been committing a fraud upon the public—For not committing a fraud in this instance, they are welcome to the merit claimed for them. Honesty, or at least the semblance of it, is the best policy. And here, for once, the polity of the party is of use to the public.

As they act upon the supposition that the American people have no intellect or memory, so they seem to imagine that the American Almanacs have no dates by which the periods of particular events can be ascertained, else surely they would not propound such an extravagant proposition as that Mr. Gallatin's abilities had essentially served and filled the treasury.

In April he came into office; in the December following his puffers state the treasury to have had an increase, by his financial exertions, of one million one hundred and fifty four thousand six hundred and seventy three dollars. Probably they mean the public should believe by this that he had procured to be adopted, carried into execution, and reaped the fruits of a new plan of finance, benefiting the nation to that amount.

Readers! have you ever read the Arabian Knights Entertainment; a book of professed miracles and falsehoods? If you have not, pray do read it that you may have the satisfaction of knowing how much that far famed work of the east is surpassed in one sort of invention by our democratic agents of the west. Turn to the wonderful story of Aladdin! read that! and then lay your hand upon your bosom and say, can the wonderful lamp of Aladdin be thought very much to surpass the wonder-working heads of our financiers, if this assertion of theirs were true. In our minds the impostor Mahomet's story that he went from Mecca to Jerusalem, from Jerusalem up to the seventh Heaven, where he held an interview of several years with God, and then returned again to Mecca, all in the space of one night, is little less worthy of credit.

But let us ask those grave tale writers of the west, what these miraculous means were, by which they pretend their treasury friend performed this extraordinary service? Have he and his western associates been seized with a fit of contrition for their whiskey freaks, and in penance paid the sum stated, or even a large part of it into the treasury, as an expiation of their sins against the state, and as a reimbursement, so far, of the expences of suppressing their insurrection? Or has it, upon the same principle of guilt awed by conscience into remorse, been refunded to the treasury by those democratic defalcators who were expelled from office upon a proof of delinquent speculation—not fairly excused and heaped with calumnies, which were afterwards controverted, as has been the case of federal officers, but, actually expelled upon incontrovertible, damning proofs of delinquency, speculation, and official guilt and default, proofs from which even the hardened heart and bra-zened front of Gallic democracy shrunk appalled skulking from the light, and like a scared fish hiding its head not abashed with shame, but astonished with fear.
We rather think they will not say that the treasury drew this mighty sum or any part of it from these resources. Then from what did it come, but from the resources created by the wisdom and financial skill of the federal governments, which were of course more productive in seven months of 1801, than they could have been in seven months of 1800. Oh wonderful! wonderful! As Shakespeare says, "such a deal of wonder is broken out that ballad makers cannot be able to express it."
